What does the law say?

The government changed the rules on term-time absence in 2013.

Under the current rules, you can only allow your child to miss school if:

- He or she is too ill to go in
- You have got advance permission from the school

How do I request permission for an absence?

You must submit a request to the school before you arrange for your child to have time away.

If you wish to take your child out of school during term time, you should speak to your child's teacher and submit a formal request to the headteacher via the school office.

The Headteacher will then consider whether to give permission for the absence

When will absence requests be granted?

Permission for absence will only be granted in exceptional circumstances.

The Headteacher will consider each absence request individually and decide whether to grant the absence.

If your child has a sibling attending Wilmslow High School or another school in the Wilmslow Partnership the school will contact the Headteacher to enquire whether the school has also received a request for term time absence. A decision will then be made together and parents informed.

The Headteacher will also decide how many days your child can be away from school if the absence is granted.

What if I take my child on an unauthorised absence?

If you take your child out of school without advance permission (except where he or she is unwell), you can be fined or even prosecuted. This could involve:

A fixed penalty notice of £60 per parent, per child, to be paid within 21 days, or £120 per child if paid after 21 days and before 28 days

- A parenting order, education supervision order or school attendance order where your child repeatedly misses school without a good reason

Why is it important?

Missing two weeks of school for a holiday might not seem like very much, but it can have a big effect on your child's education.

For example, if your child misses two weeks of school every year, this adds up to more than two terms over the child's whole time in school.

Making sure your child attends school as much as possible means:

- Your child will have the same education and opportunities as everyone else in the class
- You won't need to worry about catching up on work, or that your child might fall behind because of missing an important lesson
